

Conference: Here Comes Everybody

Joyce-Lacan Symposium
Dublin, June 16-19, 2005

In 1975 on Bloomsday, the day in 1904 on which Joyce's novel Ulysses is set, Jacques Lacan opened the 5th International Joyce Symposium at the Sorbonne, in Paris, with a paper entitled 'Joyce the Symptom'. To commemorate this event 30 years ago four psychoanalytic associations are organising a Joyce-Lacan Symposium to take place in Dublin in 2005.

The Freudian School of Melbourne is supporting this conference as a convoking association. The organising associations are, Association for Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy in Ireland, Analyse Freudienne, Escuela Freudiana de Buenos Aires and Interseccão Psicanalítica do Brasil. The latter three groups are members of Convergencia, Lacanian Movement for Freudian Analysis.

The conference will be oriented around the themes of:

- the question of the father;
- psychosis and psychiatry;
- le sinthome and the borromean knot; • writing and language;
- naming;
- the end of analysis;
- enjoyment and the Woman.

For further information about the conference
please contact Peter Gunn on 9376 1722